Guidance on Civility and Violence

It is the policy of Northwestern University that members of the University community, including faculty, staff and students, are expected to deal with each other with respect and consideration. When a community member's conduct varies from standard, it is the responsitive of the manager, chair or dean who supervises the person engagin the conduct to address it.

This policy covers a broad ranget behavior, from rude or obnoxis behavior on one end of the spectrum, to threats of violence and violence on the offile level of danger in the behavior determines the action that the supervisor should take.

Guidance on Handling Issues of Civility Thaton't Involve Imminent Threats of Violence

Disagreement is common in professional relationships, particularly in an academic environment that encourages discussion and debate of ideas. In instrances, disagreement is voiced in a respectful manner, and in such instances, no action by there is necessary. In other instances, disagreement that begins as a respectful exchange of ideas scalate into behavior that is disrespectful. Name-calling, raised voices and petty meanness are examples of this.

Any individual who believes he or she has been treianteedmanner that is inconsistent with this policy should contact his or her supervisor. It is the the supervisor, whether a manager, chair or dean, to work with the individuals involved indressing the situation, so that all members of the community can work together in a professional way

The manager, chair or dean is obligated to constant eone with administrative authority if the conduct escalates to the point where a member of the contynum is sonably believes that physical harm might occur. Examples could include behavior lacking ration to such as angry outbursts; intimidating comments or verbal abuse.

Sometimes, a threat to safety may not be appainethe first encounter but may be noticeable after repetition or increased severity. Repeated behavior that initially appears merely obnoxious may show a pattern in which danger to safety is perceived if the behavior continues.
